VEIL OF SECRECY AND PATRIOTISM BUNK

SAYS GOVERNMENT COUNCIL IN VERBAL HAND GRENADES

Hurled At the Heart of the Defense In a Three Hour Plea For the Conviction of Albert B. Fall, Former Secretary of the Interior, and Edward L. Doheny, Veteran California Oil Man, For Conspiracy To Defraud the Government.

The government Monday began its attack upon the structure of defense testimony in the Fall-Doheny oil conspiracy trial.

Owen J. Roberts, special prosecutor began the concluding argument for the government with a vigorous three-hour plea for convictions of Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior and Edward L. Doheny, veteran California oil man, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government in the leasing of the Elk Hills, California naval oil reserves.

Roberts hurled verbal hand grenades at the heart of the defense case with pointed emphasis upon Doheny's $100,000 loan to Fall November 30, 1921, upon the "war scare patriotic move" as a factor in the Peard Harbor, Hawaii, oil storage plan, and upon the "veil of secrecy," which shrouded the negotiations between him the cabinet officer prior to the signing of the Pearl Harbor contract April 25, 1922.

Touching upon the contention that Doheny bid on the Pearl Harbor project because of anxiety over the strategic situation in the Pacific in 1921, Roberts said in slow, deliberate voice:

"Patriotism, bunk! They were out after the business, it's so much moonshine."

The competition that the defense said preceded the Dohney awards was described by the prosecutor as "an illusory sort of competition."

"I don't think there was an iota of real competition," he told the jury. "This doctrine," said Roberts, alluding to Doheny's testimony that he saw nothing wrong in his loan to Fall "is subversive to all government—inevitably subversive to honest government of any kind."

Attacking the defense position that the navy department's interests in the leasing policy precluded collusion between Doheny and Fall, Roberts said that all contracts were negotiated "and then carried to Secretary Edwin Denby for his rubber stamp signature that's all there was to that."

The concluding arguments were begun after three hours of heckling and quibbling between counsel over 76 enders of instructions for the jury. which probably will receive the case Wednesday noon.

Fifteen of 28 suggested prosecution aragraphs and 20 of 48 defense teners will make up the detailed instructons. The customary defense plea or an instructed verdict of acquittal as summarily rejected by Justice dolph A. Hoehling.

Half of the government's allotted x hours were consumed by Roberts he defense will use the entire court ay and former Senator Atlee Pomene will conclude for the prosecution ednesday morning. Reading of the instructions will require an hour or more.

Roberts followed his attack upon the patriotic motive with a rereading of Doheny's testimony that he believed the Elk Hills Reserve might yield a profit of $100,000,000.

The defense declaration that fear of drainage of naval oil thru private well drainage of naval oil thru private wells dictated the leasing policy was met by Roberts with quotations from Doheny's testimony that after the lease was signed in December, 1922, extensive drilling was held up until pipe lines and refineries could be built near the reserve.

"Do you suppose, gentlemen, that if anyone was draining Mr. Doheny's oil he would have done something about it? He is no charitable institution is he?"

"They talk about patriotism; well, Mr. Doheny has testified he thought there might be a profit of $100,000,000 in the reserve, and it is in evidence that the Pan-American company made a profit of $791,000 in the oil they got in pay for the Pearl Harbor project. Those were the only contracts involved."

SOUTH BLOOMFIELD ARREST.

Charles Gleason, a former marshal of South Bloomfield was placed under arrest by Sheriff Young Monday and was brought to this city charged with carrying concealed weapons. Gleason appeared before Justice Friece, he waived examination and was bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $1,000 which he furnished.

Dr Johnson said that he liked the flies because of their silence. That was a long time ago; things are different now.

BASKET BALL GOOD GAME IS IN PROSPECT

Moeller's Pets Will Meet the C. A. C. Team Thursday Night.

Thursday night at 8:15 Moeller's Pets of Delaware and the C. A. C. basketeers will show their stuff for the benefit of local sport followers.

The Delaware team is credited with the same spirit—Fight from the first whistle to the last.

Now, when two teams of the same caliber meet, both teams bubbling over with that unknown something called "Pep" something interesting is bound to happen. The only way to find out exactly what will happen, is to be at the C. A. C. gym Thursday night.

Come to the club Thursday night. Remember, the fun starts at 8:15 prompt.

MT. PLEASEANT TEMPERANCE WOMEN MEET

Session at Home of Mrs. John Carter—Donation to the "Near East Fund"

The Mt. Pleasant W. C. T. U., held the November meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Carter. The meeting was called to order by singing "Everybody Sing," after which the scripture lesson was read from the 14th chapter of Proverbs followed by prayer by Miss Bertha Jones. The department of Flower Mission work was given to Mrs. Byron Frederick. Mrs. George Bolender was chosen as director for child welfare work. The Soldier and Sailors' department was given to Miss Bertha Jones.

A motion was next moved and seconded by the local Union to give a donation to the "Near East Fund."

Some interesting readings were then given of which "What Makes Young Men Criminals" was read by Mrs. Byron Frederick. The type of young men who commit so many petty crimes are those who do not want to work. They have come to the conclusion the world owes them a living and they are going to collect it.

Of course the World war had a great deal to do with bringing this type forward. They were pickpockets and sneak thieves and did not carry arms. They were incapable of big crimes because they lacked the courage. But the draft swept all such in the army and gave them weapons and so turned these petty criminals into more bold and courageous ones.

The trouble is the environment of so many of our young people. A judge of some prominence once said:

"Gunmen, thugs and bootleggers are not made in a day. They are the products of our homes where laxity and indifference reign. The criminals of tomorrow are in our homes and schools and on our streets today.

The leaflet "Capital Punishment" was next given by Mrs. Ida Babb.

The death penalty is a heritage that has come down to us from the past. Primitive people always used death as a punishment. Scientific dealings with criminals are exemplified by noted phrenologists should prevail and not the antiquated customs." However, the matter was early taken out of our hands.

"Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord a direct command to leave punishment by death to a Divine Power.

Miss Marvine Carter then sang a solo, after which Mrs. Bolender read the leaflet. "How to Prevent Criminals" Mr. William J. Burns, secret detective said: "Big crimes are well planned." Little crimes happen. The public schools should devote more time to describe the pitfalls that await the young man and to inform him of the necessity of avoiding the environment that may bring about his downfall.

The meeting was then closed with the W. C. T. U. benediction after which the hostess served most tempting and delicious refreshments.

CLINIC FOUNDATION

Cleveland — James W. Packard, former president of the Packard Motor company has given $200,000 to the Cleveland Clinic foundation, it was announced by William E. Lower of the clinics executive board. Income from the bequest is to be used for research in treament of the diseases of the genitourinary system, Packard stipulated. Packard now lives in Jamestown, New York, but formerly was of Warren Ohio.

ALLEGED NATION-WIDE SWINDLE IS UNEARTHED

Promoters Declared To Have Reaped Nearly $1,000,000 By False Advertising.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 13.—An alleged nation-wide swindle through newspaper advertising, which already is said to have netted its promoters approximately a million dollars, was revealed here yesterday with the arrest of D. W. Nichols, said to be from headquarter's offices maintained here by three companies offering poultry, oranges and honey for sale at unusually low prices.

Through a widespread newspaper advertising campaign, it was alleged, oranges were offered for sale, postage prepaid, for $3 per box; new honey in the comb prepaid at $1.75 per ten pounds, while bees for hiving and setting chickens were offered at quotations considerably below market prices. The goods were not delivered after the money was received.

The firms, as listed in the advertisements, officials said, included the Acme Orange Farm of La Grange, Texas; the Fulghum Hatchery, Birdsboro, Pa., Heavener Okla., Bloomsburg, Pa., and the Busy Bee Apiary, Roslyn, N. Y. Checks totalling nearly $5,000 were found in Nichols' possession when he was arrested, representing only a part of one day's receipts, officers said.

Popularity

We think more of Louis Pasteur than we do of Napoleon. Pasteur was a great benefactor of mankind but Napoleon never brought anything but misery to most of Europe and some of Africa. Yet, if those two met in New York and one walked north and the other south Pasteur would probably be lonesome and Napoleon would be suffocated by the mob.—The Third Link.

Biblical Quotation

The phrase "skin of my teeth" originates in the Book of Job.

"Nimbly-Lofty"

Long poetry some cannot be friends withal; and indeed, it palls upon the reading. The wittiest poets have been all short and changing soon their subject, as Horace, Martial, Juvenal, Seneca and the two comedians. Poetry should be rather like a Coranto, short and nimbly-lofty, than a dull lesson of a day long.—Owen Feltham, in "Resolves," 1620.

The Crickets' Song

The creaking of the crickets seems at the very foundation of all sound. At last I cannot tell it from a ringing in my ears. It is a sound from within, not without. You cannot dispose of it by listening to it. In proportion as I am stilled I hear it. It reminds me that I am a denizen of the earth.—Thoreau.

Monarch of Gems

Fred Wells, manager of Premier Mine No. 2, near Pretoria, South Africa, one day in January, 1905, while on a stroll of inspection, found what is known as the Cullinan diamond. It weighed 3,042 carats—1¾ pounds avoirdupois.

Distinction Dropped

The terms "author" and "poet" are used for both men and women. One frequently hears the word "toastmistress" employed to an authoritative speaker. There is, however, a tendency to eliminate this form of word from the English vocabulary. It is correct to call a woman an "actor," a "proprietor" or an "editor."

GIRL IS TO RECEIVE THIRD

Of Ninety-four Year Old Husband's Estate—Unmentioned In His Will.

New York, Dec. 13.—Mrs. Kate Bigelow, who as an eighteen-year-old manicure girl was married to James Harvey Hart, eighty-six-year-old retired jeweler, will share in the $1,000,000 Hart estate although she was not mentioned in the will.

Counsel for the five daughters of Hart, by an earlier marriage, today filed a proposed settlement agreement granting to the widow a dower right of life income of one third of the estate. The widow had contested the will and the case was about to come to trial.

Mrs. Bigelow was married to Hart in 1918 and he changed his will, which had left everything to his daughters, to bequeath to her a one third share. After a brief honeymoon Hart brought action for annulment, which he lost, and his wife obtained a separation verdict. He then made a will similar to the one in effect before his second marriage, making no mention of his wife. He died at the age of 94 last January, and his widow subsequently was married again.

His Understanding

A certain Sunday school teacher exhausted every means within her power to give the children an understanding of the pillar of cloud and fire that guided the children of Israel. In one instance, however, her labor was in vain. A small boy electrified the family when arriving home by giving the astounding information that a caterpillar went before the people and showed them where to go.

Kept Him From Gossiping

Among the queer queens of history, perhaps few were queerer than Catherine II of Russia. One of this great monarch's idioscyncrasies was to keep her wigmaker for more than three years in an iron cage in her bedchamber, that she might prevent him from telling other people she wore a wig.

PUTS WHEEL FIRST IN MAN'S CREATION

Hilaire Belloc Traces Role Played in Civilization.

Washington.—What is the most notable thing that man has created?

The wheel is accorded first place by Hilaire Belloc, who, in an essay with which he prefaces his pictorial history of the vehicle, glorifies this instrument of man. The volume, which has recently been published under the title, "The Highway and Its Vehicles," contains more than a hundred reproductions of old manuscript illustrations, paintings, lithographs and woodcuts, picturing the development of the vehicle from the hammock-wagon of the Twelfth century to some early motor cars, which are being raced by horses and even dogs.

Wheel Man's Own Creature.

The highway, which has so largely conditioned human history, was made by the vehicle, but the vehicle became possible only through the creation of the wheel. In comparing this discovery with others of fundamental importance, the author points out that fire was an existing thing which was only captured and tamed by man, whereas music, plastic art, and building were mimicked from nature, but the wheel is a work alone of man's conception—a fact on which to nourish his pride.

Aside from its original purpose of providing easy communication the wheel has lent aid to man in a multiplicity of functions: in grinding his corn; in turning ornaments and the furniture of his house; in drilling holes for him; in molding his clay; in telling him the direction of the wind upon his mastheads; in lifting weights out of wells, and in acting as a pulley for the development of the earliest sailing craft.

Potent In Modern Science.

From these simplest uses the wheel has branched out in one direction after another, supplementing and extending man's power. Of its recent marvelous extension, the author states:

"It gives us electrical energy to use; it transmits power; it keeps time for us; it measures all things from a map to the speed of light; it permits our curious toys such as moving pictures. It endows us with the special use of the gyroscope; it drives our turbines by steam and water, and soon, perhaps, by air. It even aids us in our vices, and by its impersonality and exactitude it makes our gambling reasonably impersonal."

Destructive Tourists

Tourists are responsible for the destruction of many of our young trees, says a state forester. "Automobilists," he says, "dig up young conifers for transplanting and usually carry them with roots exposed for great distances, expecting them to take root and grow. Most of them die. The practice should stop."

Rules for Pruning Trees

The bureau of plant industry says that pruning an evergreen tree is not recommended, as pruning is likely to spoil the shape of the plant. In choosing plants for any particular position they should be selected with the thought of the ultimate height, so that they will not need pruning. If they must be pruned, do it any time except in the spring, when the tree is making new growth.

Work and Success

The great highroad of human welfare lies along the old highway of steadfast well-doing; and they who are the most persistent, and who work in the truest spirit, will invariably be the most successful; success treads on the heels of every right effort.—Samuel Smiles.

"Trembles" and "Milk Sickness"

Recent Discoveries May Reduce Mortality From This Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The close relation between the disease known as "trembles" in cattle and "milk sickness" of persons has been the subject of scientific investigation for many years. A recent outbreak of the disease in Illinois caused the death of 15 persons, according to reports reaching the United States Department of Agriculture early in October. The outbreak is a repetition of many similar ones throughout the country and recalls heavy death losses among early pioneers from a mysterious disease.

Recent experiments by Dr. James F. Couch, of the bureau of animal industry, have resulted in new information that promises to be beneficial to the public and the live stock industry. The experiments, supplementing those of other investigators, show conclusively that poisonous plants cause trembles in cattle, sheep, horses and other animals, that animals also may be poisoned without showing symptoms of trembles, and that milk and butter from cows so poisoned are dangerous to the consuming public. The results explain also a condition which observing farmers had been reluctant to believe, namely, that milk sickness among persons may occur in the winter, when the poisonous plants are dormant.

Summary of Findings.

A summary of the bureau's latest findings includes the following facts: Two plants are responsible for trembles in live stock. In the East and Central West the poisonous plant is the richweed, also known as white snakeroot. In Texas and New Mexico, where the animal malady is called "alkali disease," the poisonous plant is the rayless goldenrod. Richweed is a slender plant, from 2 to 4 feet high, with leaves from 3 to 5 inches long, pointed and thin. It is widely distributed in the eastern part of the United States and as far west as Minnesota and Nebraska, and as far south as Louisiana. It is found generally in rich soil in damp woods. Rayless goldenrod, known in some localities as jimmy weed, is a stout, erect, tufted perennial herb, commonly from 1 to 2 feet, but it may grow taller under favorable conditions as on the banks of irrigating ditches. The leaves are narrow and about 1 to 2 inches long, usually with stout, stiff hairs on the margins.

Animalvs may be poisoned by the dry richweed plant—such as in hay—in winter, but still not have trembles. This fact is due to the presence of three poisonous substances in richweed, only one which causes symptoms of trembles in cattle and milk sickness in human beings. This poison, which is a complex alcohol, has been named "tremetol." The other two poisons are a resinous acid and a volatile oil.

The poison of the rayless goldenrod has not been studied so completely, but is known to be dangerous when the plant is either green or dry.

Products Dangerous.

Authentic records of numerous illnesses and deaths furnish abundant evidence that the products of poisoned animals are dangerous for human consumption. In some localities doctors have specialized in treating milk sickness and medical reports contain frequent references to the mystery of the disease, and of heavy "fatalities" and "panic" among settlers. Milk and butter from dairy cattle that have consumed either of the plants mentioned are considered gravely dangerous, though a conclusive chain of evidence leading directly to these products has not yet been established. This fact is due perhaps to the tendency of scientific workers to keep within their respective fields of animal and human pathology.

Even when milk sickness is not fatal to man, there usually follows a long period of illness and reduced vitality. Stock owners are advised to combat the poisonous plants mentioned by pulling or digging them up wherever found. Especially during the fall, animals also should be kept out of pastures infested with the poisonous plants.

As a further means of combating milk sickness and diagnosing suspected cases, Doctor Couch has developed a laboratory test for tremetol. Directions for making the test, which is best performed by laboratory workers, physicians, or druggists, will be furnished on application to the Pathological Division of the Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Hens Running in Snow Do Not Lay Many Eggs

Hens that run freely in the snow must not be expected to lay eggs. The chill that is constantly communicated to their bodies will use up the extra heat and energy that are needed for egg production. A few very vigorous fowls may have the power to overcome the influence of snow and ice under the feet; but most fowls will simply stop laying and will forget to begin under such circumstances. Ordinarily fowls will stand still on snow or ice or on cold wet ground. This intensifies the chilling process. Keep them in, therefore, on dry clean litter and keep them busy and they will be ten times as likely to lay eggs as they would if left to roam about all day in the snow. They will be better off in every way, too.

GREAT TREASURE BURIED ON ISLE

Wealth of Incas Hidden by Two Pirates.

Cleveland, Ohio.—Doubloons, pieces of eight, and treasures of the Spanish Main lie buried on a South American treasure island, ready for the person who is willing to dig for $50,000,000.

George Finlay Simmons, curator of ornithology of the Cleveland Museum of Natural History, said on his return from the island that the treasure, taken from the Inca Indians, lies undisturbed where it was buried a century ago, by two pirates, on the island off the coast of Brazil.

Reminiscent of the days of Captain Kid, the story of the treasure is replete with lore of roving buccaneers, slashing cutlasses and treasure maps.

One of the hoards, Doctor Simmons said, amounts to $40,000,000 and was buried by a Spanish pirate, Jose Santos, who captured a ship laden with gold and silver bar, altar vestments, and candalebras from the churches of Lima, Peru.

More than $8,000,000 more was buried on the same island by an English pirate who styled himself "Zulmiro," Doctor Simmons said. Records of this "prize" were kept and were in the possession of the Russian quartermaster of the ship, until he died in the Far East.

Eight expeditions were made to find the treasure between 1800 and 1892. Doctor Simmons said, but most of them never reached the desolate coast of the island. Those that did found landmarks left on the map wiped out by a landslide.

"Robert Louis Stevenson used the island as the scene of "Treasure Island," " Doctor Simmons said, "but the swag found in fiction is still there in reality."

Doctor Simmons was commander of the Blossom, research ship of the Cleveland museum which cruised the South seas for two and a half years, visited three continents and brought back specimens for the museum's collection.

"Bad Man" Began His Lawless Life Early

Bill Langley probably was one of the toughest characters that Texas ever produced, Owen P. White tells us, in Collier's Magazine. According to his family Bible he was born of honest, God-fearing parents, but he took to shooting early. When he was only fourteen years old he was doing his daily dozen with a pair of six-shooters and filling all the trees in the ancestral wood lot with clusters of leaden bullets, generally grouped a dozen in a spot and no spot more than six inches in diameter. Thus early in life did Bill make a bid for fame. He learned to shoot with both hands; afoot or horseback, it was the same to him. But, sad to relate of one so young, Bill's conscience apparently was just as well trained as his shooting eye. It never bothered him in the slightest degree. Hence, before he was nineteen years he had six nicks on his gun and had been hanged by a Texas vigilance committee. But the hanging did not "take." Members of the party fired shots at him as they rode away. One of the bullets clipped the rope, weakening it, and a few moments later he dropped to the ground and quickly recovered. After several years of wild depredation, Langley was executed in Giddings, Texas, October 11, 1878.

A windy argument is easily punctured.

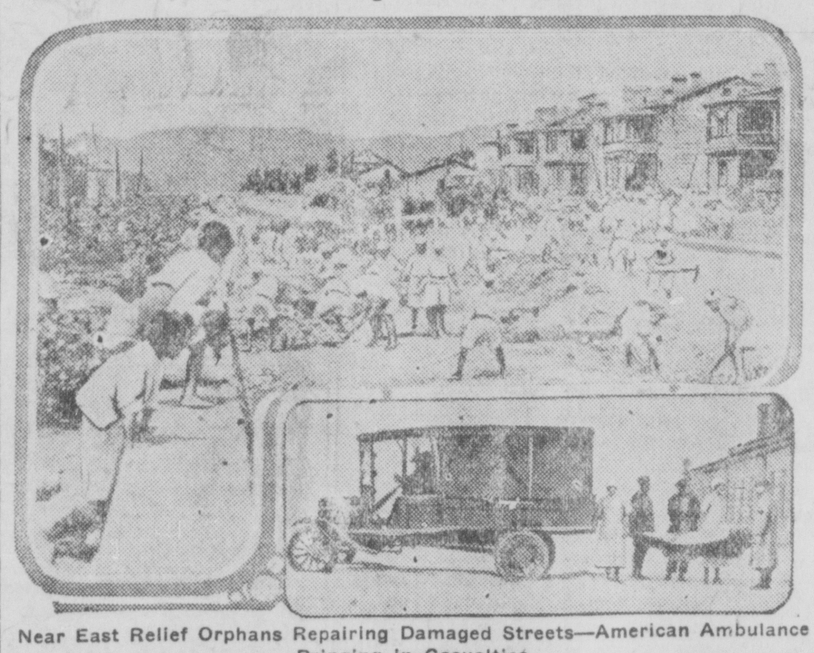
Dramatic Poster Tells Graphic Story Of Need in Armenian Quake Zone

THIS dramatic poster by G. Patrick Nelson, prize winner in the thousand dollar contest conducted by Henry Morgenthau for the best poster for the Golden Rule Sunday campaign of the Near East Relief, tells in graphic fashion the story of the Armenian earthquake disaster. Primarily intended to provide funds for the child welfare work of the relief organization in Armenia, Syria, Palestine, Turkey, Persia, and Greece, the Golden Rule Sunday campaign this year will be used to collect funds for the earthquake victims. The disaster not only upset a large part of the reconstructive efforts of the relief organization in Armenia, but it created a vast army of homeless. It is estimated that approximately 80 per cent of the homes in the tiny country were destroyed and people are living in bitter zero weather in rough dugouts, without sufficient food or blankets and practically no fuel.

A large number of the victims are children and many new orphans have been forced upon the relief organization for care. Approximately $1,000,000 will be required to meet the earthquake needs and to care for the children already in the orphanages until June. The Golden Rule Sunday campaign, endorsed by President Coolidge, is the only answer to the situation.

Relief Work in Wake of Earthquake At America's Orphan City in Armenia



Near East Relief Orphans Repairing Damaged Streets—American Ambulance Bringing in Casualties.

THE Armenian earthquake has laid waste the most novel city in the world. Cable dispatches to the Near East Relief indicate that its orphanage centers of the organization in Leninakan, formerly Alexandropol, have been seriously damaged by the disastrous earthquake that cost 500 lives and made 80,000 homeless in the mountain country.

The orphan city was established by the Near East Relief shortly after the armistice, being housed in barracks that once belonged to the Imperial Army of the Russian Czars. At one time 35,000 children were cared for here, though rehabilitation efforts had been so successful up to the time of the earthquake that the number had been reduced to nine thousand. The disaster, however, now threatens to throw a large number more on the hands of the organization.

Relief officials on the field have estimated that a million dollars will be required to provide adequate relief in the earthquake zone and to furnish sufficient funds to repair the orphan city and maintain it until June.

People in the United States are urged by the Near East Relief, 151 Fifth avenue, New York City, to observe International Golden Rule Sunday, for the benefit of the earthquake victims and to aid in the continuation of work in the earthquake zone and in Greece, Syria, Palestine, Turkey, and Persia for another year.

Help Her Keep Her Feet!

The Armenian earthquake has left 80,000 people homeless. Near Ea Relief needs $1,000,000 to meet this emergency.

AMUSEMENTS

As clean and wholesome and inspiring as the vast outdoors it pictures so realistically, "Forlorn River" latest of the Zane Grey classics, swept into the Met theater last night to stir the sluggish blood of an eager first night audience.

Here is a swift, exciting romance-drama that has much of interest to moviegoers quite apart from its entertainment values. It recreates one of the most colorful and violent periods in the upbuilding of the west—that rip-roaring era when the forces of law and order clashed in a desperate struggle for supremacy with the forces of outlawry. Those were the days when a quick trigger and a fast horse were a man's best friends. Because of this historic significance "Forlorn River" has an heroic flavor usually lacking in the average socalled western.

George C. Hull, the scenarist, and John Waters, the director, have done full justice to Mr. Grey's original story, both in the matter adaptation and staging. The picture is a thing of speed and suspense, bristling with dramatic action, which has been skillfully balanced with some excellent comedy moments. In addition, it has the advantage of extraordinary scenic settings, for it was filmed against the rugged background of Zion National park, Utah.

Jack Holt heads a competent cast in the picturesque role of a "good bad-man." He first appears as an outlaw and fugitive from justice, but later turns against the cattle rustlers in his efforts to rescue the girl he loves. Arlette Marchal, charming French actress, plays the harassed heroine with commendable restraint and sincerity. Edmund Bruns acquits himself creditably as Miss Marchal's boyhood sweetheart. To Raymond Hatton belongs all of the credit for the many laughs scattered thruout the production. His portrayal of the tramp compuncher is a neat bit of characterization.

Material Needed to Make Up Square Meal

The familiar expression "a square meal" may be adapted to represent a complete diet supplying all the material that the body needs, say R. H. A. Plimmer of the University of London and Violet G. Plimmer in Hygeia Magazine. The center of the square is filled with the fat, carbohydrate, mineral salts and water; the corners are filled respectively with vitamines A, B and C and protein P.

The corner A represents both the fat soluble vitamines A and D, which are found in the same foods. Foods from the same corner may be used alternatively, but a food from one corner is not a substitute for one from another corner. A square meal consists of food from all four corners in suitable proportions.

Some of the foods in the A corner are butter, cod liver oil, milk, egg yolk and liver; in the C corner are fresh fruits, especially citrus fruits, tomatoes and green vegetables either raw or very slightly cooked; the B corner contains whole meal cereal products, dried peas, beans and lentils and nuts; corner P includes meat, eggs, milk and cheese and fish.

PUSH BUTTON RUNS HUGE CATTLE RANCH

Successors to Texas Pioneer Use Electricity.

Menard, Texas.—Otto Carlin lighted a new oil lamp, drew water with a pump, examined one of the new iron nails which were rapidly displacing the old wooden pegs, and thought it was progress. But he kept a few of the old candles on hand and preserved the old oaken bucket for safety. That was 1877, and the place was the famous 100,000-acre Las Moras ranch.

Otto's assignees and descendants now press a button. Magic lamps glow, meals cook, chickens hatch, pumps draw water, saws cut wood, sheep are clipped, refrigerators refrigerate, grindstones grind, and waffle irons waffle. They just push a button.

Electricity also is transforming the cattle ranches.

Life Moves Faster Now.

Life moves with a swifter tempo on the land which Otto Carlin blocked out 50 years ago. Otto would not know the place.

Toiling up the valley of the Colorado river from Austin, Texas, in the summer of 1877, an ox train forded the clear stream of the Llano and, drawing up at a spot on the San Saba river in Menard county, deposited a cargo of lumber and square pointed nails. Out of these Carlin built his ranch house in the desolate waste that was then West Texas.

Recently the old house was razed and on its site, made out of some of its own timbers, stands a ranch house of a new type—a spreading bungalow with wide porches and spacious rooms, hardwood floors and oak fittings. And beside each polished door is an electric light switch.

A strange thing mounted on a truck, having long limber arms, comes along on Las Moras ranch these days. It is a moving "barber shop" equipped to "bob" sheep electrically. Otto Carlin used to truss a sheep up with buckskin thong and harvest the wool with a clumsy pair of shears, one clip at a time. Now the twinkling blades of the sheep barber can turn out 150 hair cuts a day each. An expert hand clipper, working at top speed, cannot do more than 50

Electricity Does It.

Descendants of Otto Carlin's dairy cows munch food cut by electric ensilage cutters, give their milk to an electric milking machine and are comforted by an electric fan which drives away the flies. Mother hens can play barnyard bridge, while an electric incubator hatches their chickens and an electric brooder raises them. Horses are branded by electric irons and clipped by electric clippers, while electric irons of a different type curl the maid's hair and iron the men's shirts.

Las Moras ranch does not stretch so far away into the sunset as it formerly did, because the 100,000 acres has dwindled to 19,000. But this curtailed acreage produces more wealth than the original 100,000 did.

Charles L. Martin owns the place, and his four sons, college trained, operate it. They have installed almost every modern mechanical device known in farm operations.

Trout in Hawaii

The common American brook trout has adapted itself to Hawaii, development of the fish in the fresh waters of Kauai island indicate. During the last few years introduction of trout into Kauai streams has been undertaken by fish and game wardens. Trout fishing is becoming a favorite pastime. Several trout caught recently measured 12 inches and over.

Versatility in Frogs

A female frog brought up a family of robins whose mother apparently had been killed. This happened in Llanbrino, Wales, in a hedge bank near the city. All day the frog collected worms and flies for her foster family, pausing only to croak angrily when curious visitors got too near the nest. She showed a true maternal instinct throughout the rearing period.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

1926 MEMBERSHIP RECORD IS BROKEN

The American Legion began the most intensive membership campaign in its history immediately following the eighth national convention held in Philadelphia, and within a few weeks state departments had reported to national headquarters in Indianapolis, Ind., that one-third more members had been enrolled for 1927 than had paid advance membership in the same period the year before, which was a record breaker. The total membership for 1926 was greater than it had been since 1922 and 1926 was the first year in which an increase was shown over the preceding year.

Membership contests between states started in lively fashion almost simultaneously with the return of Legionnaires to their homes from Philadelphia. The department of Florida issued a sweeping challenge to every department having a total of 5,000 members for an advance membership race, a silver loving cup to be the prize in each instance. The departments of Illinois, Texas, Wisconsin and California accepted the challenge at once. The terms were fixed on a percentage basis, the advance 1927 membership to be compared with the total membership in each department.

A contest between Minnesota and Michigan for the possession of the "Little Brown Jug," which attracted wide attention in 1926, also was declared early. The jug was presented to Minnesota by national headquarters in the 1926 race. The race is based on the highest total numerical advance members. The idea of the jug came from the annual football game of the universities of those states.

Illinois, New York and Pennsylvania renewed their "battle royal" and again entered a contest, the deciding factor of which is the highest total number of members thirty days prior to the national convention.

In addition to the various races between state departments, there are a number of national membership trophies awarded each year to the winning departments, the terms for the national honors being different in almost every instance. There also are numerous contests between local posts, some of them attracting much attention because of the unique prizes or penalties involved.

Whiskers and an Adam's apple figure in a competitive membership contest between two individual Legionnaires. Six weeks' growth of whiskers will mask the mug of the loser when he attends the state convention of the Legion in Helena, Ark. Will D. O'Shea, poet laureate of the Victor Ellig post of Fort Smith, Ark., challenged Lemar L. Moore, the post commander, to an individual member-getting race. Commander Moore snapped up the challenge.

Chester (Pa.) Legion Mourns Death of Terrier

"Nig" is dead. He was just a little black Scotch terrier but veterans of the One Hundred Eleventh infantry, members of Post No. 190, of the American Legion, and a large part of Chester, Pa., mourn his loss. He was a hero of five battles in France.

"Nig" volunteered for service with the A. E. F. during a bombardment one rainy night near the Argonne forest. A little puppy then, he crawled into a barn where Charles Henderson and several buddies of the One Hundred Eleventh infantry, Twenty-eighth division, were seeking shelter. Henderson shared his food and blanket with the dog and when the American advance continued in the morning, the puppy marched with the attacking waves.

Coming through the big American offensives unhurt, the little terrier was smuggled to the United States after the Armistice. For years he was kept at Henderson's home in Chester and endeared himself to the entire neighborhood. He was killed by an automobile.

A protest was made to the governor of Jerusalem by the Jewish community council against granting a contract to Arabs to repair Rachel's tomb, which is four miles from the city, says the Pathfinder Magazine. This tomb, which has been venerated by the Jews for 3,000 years, was protected by the Crusaders with a small building crowned by a cupola. It has been restored many times.

Black Silk Lace Used for Afternoon Dress

This smart dress, ideal for milady's afternoon tea, is made of black silk lace and georgette, and is worn with a slip of flesh satin.

Sport Dress Is Holding Its Own in Fall Wear

Despite the fact that fall is an extremely dressy season of velvets, metal brocades and lustrous silks, the sport dress is not neglected. Women have found that the sport dress is indispensable and gives more elaborate frocks. For outdoor sports it is by all means the smartest thing one can wear.

The two-piece dress is still sponsored by smart gown houses although it is varied a bit this season by using two contrasting colors or by introducing the bloused bodice. Jersey and crepella are the favored materials. The blouse may be of contrasting colors to the skirt or the two-colored idea may be carried out on the jumper only.

For instance, a jersey dress of burnt orange has two large squares of black jersey appliqued on front and rear of the bodice forming a plaid idea while the skirt is carried out in the major color, orange. White wool feather-stitching joins the black squares to the orange material. Purplish reds and wine colors are particularly stressed in sports wear this year. Jumpers of purplish red jersey cloth combine with navy blue jersey skirts. Again the bright color may be used as banding on a darker and contrasting color.

In getting away from the simple straight lines of the average two-piece jumper dress we find jumpers which are made very long and tight at the bottom so that they may be pulled up to fit snugly about the hips and form a blouse. Some models have the blouse held in by a stitched-on belt with a fitted peplum falling below the belt. Black is a very smart color this season for sport wear and many bright colored sport frocks are combined with a slender black kasha coat. The small black felt hat is one of these meeting with most success.

Velveteen jackets worn with velveteen or jersey skirts are also included among the smart sport outfits. Deep blues, browns, fine reds and greens are popular shades for these models. Skirts of most of the sport frocks are plain except for two or three plaits at the front or side front. Lengths are shorter for sport wear than for dress wear.

Sport Rings Are Among Latest in Jewelry Fad

Along with the unprecedented vogue for jewelry in one form or another there has come about a renewed interest in rings. In place of the sedate signet or the very much bejeweled ones there are the sport ring and others. Being just novelties, many of these rings are selected for wear with a certain necklace, pin or ornament of some kind. The sport rings are offered chiefly in colored enamels, with or without marcasite settings. In the other rings semi-precious stones are used singly and match other jewelry worn or give an individual decorative note to the entire costume.

Large square-cut emeralds, sapphires and amethysts, with a fine border of rhinestones, may be selected for afternoon occasions. Onyx, too, is much in evidence, but remains the choice of many for evening use. Large rhinestone rings with intricate engravings or with designs outlined in fine pearls or very tiny rhinestones are a beautiful complement to any evening gown. With these rings, too, are used colored stones, but the season's preference seems to be for combinations of rhinestones and pearls

Crepe Satin Favored

Crepe satin is a favored medium for afternoon frocks. In one fall collection the dressier afternoon frocks are of two kinds—one comprising those made in crepe satin, velvet or moire. These dresses are rather severe of cut and those made in crepe satin are very often in black trimmed with white.

ONE PAIL

Of Water May Save Building From Burning Down.

All fires are the same size when they start and there is some one near over half the time when they do start. A pail of water near at hand may save a building.

A pail of water is the oldest, simplest and cheapest fire extinguisher. Fire buckets to be used for no other purpose than fire can easily be placed in all buildings. They are so effective in extinguishing small fires that insurance companies grant lower rates to manufacturers and merchants who use them. Yet there are few farm buildings where buckets of water are placed to be used for fire only.

Buckets should be refilled at regular intervals and placed up on shelves or hung on brackets where they will not be covered up, spilled, or filled with trash. In cold weather, Virgil Overholt, extension specialist in agricultural engineering at the Ohio State University says, the water can be kept from freezing, except at unusually low temperatures, by adding salt. About two pounds to a bucketful.

The water needs to be applied at the base of the fire, not up in the flames and smoke. A wet broom is often more effective than throwing the water at the fire from a distance.

Chemical extinguishers have many advantages over water, but they cost more. They cannot be used for anything else, and are always found in place when needed. One extinguisher holds approximately 2½ gallons and is effective as many times that of water if applied correctly.

Elephant Rickets

How would you cure an elephant of rickets? The London zoo authorities have been up against that problem, and they have returned to ultra-violet rays after finding that surgical boots did not straighten the bent, weak bones well enough. For five minutes daily the elephant is drenched with ultra-violet rays from a powerful mercury vapor lamp.

Cobra Deaf to All Sounds

The cobra is deaf to all sounds, its hearing apparatus consisting of a delicate membrane which receives only ground vibrations. Indian charmers, knowing this, tap the box or basket in which the reptile is kept, partly stunning the creature by the force of the vibrations. It is thus rendered tractable so it can be handled.

"Right as a Trivet"

By MARTHA M. WILLIAMS

(Copyright.)

"TOM, Tom, the piper's son, stole a pig and home he run!" Big-Sister Jane chanted teasingly—whereat Patsy, aged seven, observed: "Didn't, didn't! He didn't. Gentlemen don't steal. He's a gentleman—daddy says so."

"H—m. 'Fraid you're in love with him," from Jane.

"Course I am!" came back. "He's goin' to marry me soon as I grow up to his chin."

"That's a mighty long grow," Jane sighed, shaking her head. "Now, you are barely up to his elbow. Suppose you pick a shorter one—say Rabbit Ellis—he'll never stretch much beyond five feet—"

"I hate Rabbit Ellis! 'Wusser'n pizen,' as mammy says. Says, too, she wouldn't have him fer soap-grease, though he would make such a nice big potful," Patsy exploded.

Jane giggled. "I see! Mammy has the say—she's all for Tom-Go-Tumble-Toe—"

"Never you mind about me. I know who she's picked for you," from Patsy impudently.

"Tell me! Please!" Jane coaxed, her eyes dancing.

"That funny-named man—Mr. Angewurm," Patsy cried, whirling to make a very puffy cheese upon the rug, and then: "Say! Are you goin' ever to be Mrs. Angewurm?"

"That's exactly what I'm here to find out," Tommy Trimble-toes, otherwise Thomas Mallow Trimble, Esq., demanded from the doorway.

Patsy ran to him, snuggled under his arm, clutched his hand and pressed it to her cheek saying: "Yes, she is! Look how red her face has got. Mammy says that's the shore sign. And I'm glad—'cause she'll have to let you alone, while I'm growin' up to your chin."

"So she will! I hadn't thought of that," Tommy agreed, his eyes also dancing—then to Jane: "When you're presented at court—as you will be, his mother being fifth cousin to a duke—do write and tell us benighted folk how it feels.'

"Certainly—but 'fraid it will be waste effort," from Jane, her head high. "I write so blindly, you know—and by the time you have set, you're likely to be—blinder than a bat."

"Worse than—now?" Tommy asked huskily under breath. She turned very pale, but did not speak.

"Pat-see! Better come yere and git yo' ha'er curled, ef you wanter go fishin' termorrow," mammy called through the door. As Patsy darted out, Tommy called after her: "Be sure you take along Mister Angewurm He's utterly no good alive—but nicely drowned he might stand you in a new frock."

"Why so wicious-wiolent?" Jane demanded as he moved toward her.

"You're the reason," he said quietly. "Honestly, girl—I could give you up to a man—a real man—though it would be harder than dying. But this blot on the landscape—positively he poisons the air so I hate to breathe when he comes about. So patronizing to all America—fat and fubsy, and a glutton of the worst. Puts me in mind of a sawed-off shotgun—so stubby and awkward. To think of you looking down at him four inches—"

Jane's lids were lowered—to hide the dancing underneath them. Now she felt ashamed; she ought to have known better than to believe Mrs. Sutton, who had almost forced St. George's to give this Englishman a trial—and was bent upon settling him permanently in the rectory. For reasons doubtless—she was wildly ambitious—the example of many Americans who got into high society by way of London town, and court presentations, had not been lost on her. Her money—a war-fortune—plus the Angewurm high connections, might land her in the heart of things—and so firmly she would stick there.

As a help to that, he must marry Jane Lee Lewis—who had a singer, a President and generals galore in her pedigree, to say nothing of a tidy inheritance already secure, and rich, very rich expectations.

Jane saw it all now—not as in a glass darkly, but by a light of understanding unlikely ever to dim. But she might not have surrendered without discretion then and there, had not Fate, playing hard for Tommy, sent Brother Fishin' Worm upon the scene. At sound of his voice outside, Tommy shrank back into the library—thus Jane alone greeted him, standing tall and twenty—dewy-lipped, bright-eyed with damask roses flaming in her cheeks. He took her hand in both his—drew her close, and raised his lips toward hers. In a mirror Tommy saw it—he gave a fair imitation of a cyclone in his passage to the scene of action. Snatching Angewurm off his feet he swung him clear, and whirled with him to the outer door—there he pitched him neck and crop down the steps, then turned to find Patsy staring in fright against a background of mammy shaken through and through with Homeric laughter. "I dunno, how-come he got it, Marse Tommy," she said, "but he sho' did git whut was comin' ter him—and right spang in de good time. Ole Miss Sutton's cook ups and tells me her lady is gwine to marry dat hop-o-my thumb to our Jane—I tooked an' tole Patsy—and so hits all comin' right."

"Right as a trivet," said Miss Jane suddenly appearing in the doorway.

THE TROUBLES OF WELFARE WORKERS

With the approach of severe weather and the Christmas season, when every person with a spark of conscience gives a few thoughts to the well being of his fellow man and his thoughts lead him to do at least one little helpful act for the benefit of those who are less fortunate, the welfare worker is sought and asked for advice regarding this work.

To be sure there are many needy families and children in all localities and Circleville is no exception to the general rule. However, much credit is due the Benevolent Society and Red Cross workers who make a careful study and assist the needy ones.

This work would not be hard if those who were benefited would appreciate what is done for them and would show their appreciation by complying with the requests of these workers. It must be remembered that the majority of the needy ones are in the position that necessitates charity because of lack of management or laziness. Many a man has been driven to waywardness by an indolent wife who will neglect her home and her children. Too, many a child has been made an orphan by a lazy father whose neglect forced the mother to overtax her strength and bring her to an early grave. It seems to be an easy matter for the wise persons to sit at home and make remarks about the treatment of certain persons by the workers who are in reality the guardian angels of the poor. A familiar remark that is heard is, "let the court send them where they belong." Anyone familiar with the law will realize that this is not an easy matter. In fact in some cases it is impossible, because of lack of room in the County and State institutions.

A certain worker who has been caring for a family of three children whose father had been ill and whose mother is the last word in laziness, told a story the other day regarding the family which demonstrates clearly why patience is needed in her work. This family, the head of which makes a very nice salary when employed, lives in a two room cottage, whose floors are not covered, except with filth, and whose windows have been replaced numberless times by charitably inclined persons. While making a call at this home where she had been furnishing for a time, practically all the necessities of life, one of the children was missed and upon inquiry was told that there was just 15 cents in the house and the mother had sent the child to the store. The worker remained until the return of the child and found that 5 cents had been expended for a square of bacon and the remaining 10 cents had purchased a package of scrap tobacco for both the mother and father to chew. These children are attending the public school and mingle with other children. The teachers have been forced to furnish clean underclothing for their own protection. It certainly is not because they have not been taught how to care for themselves but because of carelessness and laziness.

Another case of indifference and ignorance was that of a veteran who had been begging assistance from every charitable organization in the city, claiming to be unable to work and after undergoing an operation and examination at a Government hospital felt too ill to work. Whether he was too ill or not, his children were needy and he secured help from various sources because of them.

The local Red Cross secretary had applied for compensation for him and had secured an offering of underclothing for the children which she sent word to the mother to come for. When she arrived she told the secretary that they had been granted the compensation from the Government and that she had purchased some things for them, being honest enough to tell it before accepting the garments. This was good news and the check had arrived just late that day, but she told the Secretary that she had paid some of the bills and would pay the rest as the check was for back pay which amounted to some hundreds of dollars. The next she heard of these people was that they had purchased an auto and was paying for it. This had all taken place in less that forty-eight hours after they had been so destitute that they were begging for something to eat.

This and similar occurences are what confront the welfare workers and make their work all the harder.

However, there are many needy persons whom it would be a pleasure to help and at this beautiful season of the year there are not many who could find them if they only took the time to think of them.

"APPLE KING OF AMERICA" IS DEAD

New York, Dec. 13.—Joseph H. Steinhardt, known among produce men as the "apple king of America," and credited with introducing the honeydew melon into this country, is dead.

He left Germany 49 years ago at the age of 13 and his first job was rolling barrels of apples for a truckman. He expected to get a quarter for his work, but was given his choice between a bag of apples and a swift kick. He ate three apples and sold the rest for 50 cents. This was the start of his business, which had a $15,000,000 annual turnover at the time of his death.

SAN BLAS INDIANS AT EDGE OF CULTURE

Little Chance to Develop Trends Now Outlined.

Washington.—If the San Blas Indians of Panama could be left alone for the next few centuries, they might develop a unique culture, like the famous Maya of Yucatan. But this interesting scientific experiment has little chance of taking place, since alien tribes are steadily encroaching on the land occupied by the San Blas.

The situation among these Indians, who have become widely known in this country through the visit of the "white Indians" of their tribe, is described by Herbert W. Krieger, ethnologist of the United States National museum, in a new government publication on the people of southeastern Panama.

The San Blas, who are a link between the Peruvians and the Maya in their characteristics, have not amalgamated with other tribes since very early times.

Coast Guards Trail Strangers.

Watchmen of the tribe guard the coast and trail any strangers who come to a native village, and any attempt to stay overnight is discouraged. But the Panamains are trying to force this independent and self-sufficient group to accept their government and to send their children to school, and it is only a matter of time before they will give in and will blend with other tribes.

The only measure which might enable the San Blas to remain isolated would be to establish a reservation. And while this might solve the problem to the satisfaction of the San Blas, Mr. Krieger says, as far as science is concerned, it would really come too late now for the tribe to develop its own culture.

"The reason why they have not perfected a system of writing, a calendar or other developments of a high civilization may be that they have never gathered into large communities," Mr. Krieger believes. "Instead, they live in small villages off the islands of the Panama coast, and commute to the mainland where they cultivate plantations.

Have Turtle Calendar.

"The first step toward a system of recording time is shown in the turtle calendar of the San Blas. This consists of a stick worn around the neck, with which to keep account of the time of hatching of the turtle eggs. When a turtle comes ashore to build its nest, the Indian fisherman begins cutting notches in the stick until fourteen days have gone, when he knows the turtle will again come ashore to visit its nest and the eggs can be taken from the nest and eaten."

The beginnings of an alphabet may be seen in their system of nemonic or memory writing, which is a highly developed form of picture writing intelligible to the initiated and used to record lore concerning treatment of disease, religious practices and tribal history.

Mr. Krieger's new publication on the culture of the people of southwestern Panama is intended chiefly to catalogue and describe the National museum's fine collection of over 1,000 objects from that region.

Bar Chinese Narcissus Infested With Insects

San Francisco.—The "Avenue of the Temple of Heaven" mourns. An indescribable loss is felt in the narrow streets and dark alleyways of San Francisco's Chinatown, for the government has placed its foot down on further importations of the famed Chinese water lily or narcissus, because destructive insects have been found secreted in the innocent-looking bulb.

The fragrant plant, some Chinese believe, has powers to prophesy the grower's prospects for the ensuing year. Generally at this time of the year, the bulbs are being prepared for planting, timed to blossom forth their flowery message of hope or despair on the first day of the new year.

Some have tried to preserve last year's flowers by drying them and burying them in earth, but the outcome of this method is uncertain, and as no substitute has been found Chinatown faces abandonment of one of its principal New Year's table decorations.

Student-Operated Bank Makes Record

Lynn, Mass.—Students in the Lynn English high school run their own savings bank and combine, to practical advantage, study and thrift. The bank is said to hold the records for deposits in such an institution in a single day—$3,150—received one Monday morning. The school has 1,400 students.

The Lynn system of a student operated school bank has been tested by 12 years' successful service. It has been copied in 14 states and two foreign countries.

Regular banking rooms are maintained. Students, themselves, fill the various positions, receive the deposits and keep the accounts. The school savings plan has spread in one form or another to all the public schools of the city above the third grade. In that time the students have saved more than $200,000.
